THE THIRTEENTH
CATALOGUE
&
A HISTORY OF THE
HASTY PUDDING
CLUB

EDITORS' PREFACE

IN the present volume the Editors have endeavored to present to the members of the Hasty Pudding Club a record of the Club since its founding in 1795, in the form of a complete list of members, a history of the development of the Society, and brief accounts of that period which, more than any other, pointed the direction of the Club's future career. In striving to fulfil this aim we have carefully studied the old records and consulted graduate members, who have supported us generously wherever their assistance was needed. To them, and especially to Mr. William R. Thayer, '81, and to Mr. Owen Wister, '82, the Editors wish to express their heartiest thanks.

The list of members has been made up from the Catalogue of 1902, the Secretary's Records, and the Constitution Book, revised carefully with the coöperation of the keeper of the records for the Harvard Quinquennial Catalogue. The illustrations in the History are from old Secretary's Records.

The degrees, titles, and necrology have been taken literally from the Harvard Quinquennial Catalogue of 1905, annotated to June, 1907, and the Class Reports, except that Mass. Hist. Soc. has been further abbreviated to

M.H.S., Fellow Am. Acad. to F.A.A., and Am. Philos. Soc. to A.P.S., as in the 1902 Catalogue. The final spelling of proper names as there indicated has also been followed. No attempt has been made to distinguish members who received their degrees from those who did not. The names of members on whom degrees were conferred out of course have been placed with the classes from which they were elected, followed by the date of the degree.

An important variation from the Twelfth Catalogue will be found in the fact that the separate lists of officers have been omitted to avoid unnecessary repetition. The officers in each class have been placed at the head of the list of members. Where two or more men have held the same office during a single year, they have been ranked according to the seniority of their election.

The Editors beg that all notices of errors or omissions be sent to them promptly, in order that they may record them for the next Catalogue.

HISTORY OF THE HASTY PUDDING CLUB

It is somewhat extraordinary that an organization which has seen such vicissitudes as the Hasty Pudding Club, lasting over a period of more than a hundred years, should still be in possession of the first page which records the proceedings of the Society. A little volume, bound in rough calf-skin, and containing some hundred pages of paper so yellow as almost to match the faded brown of the ink, gives an account of those early meetings when the Hasty Pudding was making its first five years of history.

The group of Juniors which gathered in Nymphas Hatch's room on the evening of September 1, 1795, came together in a "spirit of patriotism"; the black pot of Indian meal which steamed on the fire was Yankee hasty pudding, and one of the leading articles of the constitution which was drawn up at that meeting with great solemnity provided that there should be an oration and poem pronounced before the Society "on the evening of the birthday of the great Washington."

The first year of the Club was an experiment, and there is no indication that the members ever discussed making it a permanent affair until they came together on the anniversary of their first meeting, when they decided "to admit seventeen of the most worthy members of the Junior class." Every Saturday night, promptly at the ringing of the commons bell, the Club assembled in the room of one of its members, and the two "providers" brought the pot of pudding between them from Mrs. Frost's, who was at that time the official pudding-maker. Another rule provided that every meeting should close "with what is commonly called 'sacred music.'" The character of this closing song became less and less sacred as the years went on.

As Washington's Birthday approached, the meetings were in a flurry of preparation. Every detail of the celebration was settled beforehand, and, on the evening of the 22d, the Club met in Isaac Wellington's room and listened to a poem by James Richardson. But "the time to begin the general illumination having come, the Club postponed singing the hymn till after supper, and retired to light up their candles. After lighting the candles, and surveying the glorious prospect, they met again and proceeded to supper." At supper there were toasts, a patriotic hymn to the tune of St. Martin's, and an oration. The record concludes, "The Club retired to extinguish their candles, and with hearts full of conviviality and patriotism."

In later years it became the custom to have the Washington's Birthday supper at Porter's, the town tavern, whither the Club, "after forming in a procession, marched down in the greatest order, amid files of admiring spectators."

At the final meeting of the first year, in July, 1796, "the pudding being very poor, many members spoke discouragingly of the Club, and apprehended its dissolution. But, it being suggested that the fault of the pudding was in the making, the Club voted that Mrs. Frost shall stand Pudding-maker to the Club no longer. After some animating speeches, the desponding spirits of the Club were raised. N. B. This meeting, tho' thin, was very turbulent."

Mrs. Frost's successor was Mrs. Rebecca Kidder, variously styled in the Pudding records as Mother, Madame, and Sister Kidder. She remained pudding-maker for many years, and her ministrations were so satisfactory that once, during the mock-trial period of the Club, she was gallantly indicted for witchcraft, on the strength of her puddings.

After the first initiation of new members the meetings grew considerably more hilarious. The Seniors furnished the ballast and the Juniors the breeze. At one meeting "the voice of patriotism was too much oppressed by the weight of pudding, and to sing 'Adams and Liberty' was attempted in vain." The Society voted: "That Lee be obliged to transport the empty pot to Madame Kidder's as a punishment of using impudent language to the president," "That the thanks of the Society be proffered to Williams for his glorious exertion but ill success in keeping order in the meeting," and "That every member present should give the pot a long adieu by a friendly kiss, which was done, not without some exquisite emotion." Another meeting broke up, and "retired to the play yard for a social game of bat and ball." In 1799 Washington Allston started the custom of keeping the secretary's reports in rhyme, a custom which has been the bane of all secretaries with the possible exception of Lowell, though even he once found it difficult to write funny verses with a splitting headache. Under a sketch of a greedy youth, seated crosslegged before the iron pot, are Allston's lines, recording the meeting of March 7, 1799:—

"The sun had sunk, the melancholy knell
That lately moaned from the commons bell
Was heard no more; a deadly silence hung
O'er nature's works, and chained each gabbling tongue,
When, lo, by every eye and mouth rever'd,
In Noyes' room the awful pot appeared."

The last two lines, with the substitution of different names, became a formula for the secretaries of the next three decades. At other times the reports of the meetings are in somewhat general terms, as "All cordially partook of what was set before them, asking no questions for conscience's sake, and after the supper the Society paraded the streets of Cambridge till twelve o'clock with music in front."

By 1800 the pot of hasty pudding had become an old story, and it was evident that if the Club was to continue it must have some more definite reason to exist. It was accordingly organized into a debating society, and "eight members disputed extempore on questions of literature, morality and politics." One or two weeks later the secretary remarks, "The good effects resulting from this alteration were already visible." The questions for debate are those which have been threshed out in public and in private, on platforms and over hearths, by school-boys for the last several hundred years:—

"Whether all persons properly qualified are under any obligation to marry," "Whether the company of the fair sex be advantageous to a Scholar," "Whether the character of a mere Gallant or a mere Pedant be more despicable."

One of the first debates was on the question "Whether theatrical exhibitions be, upon the whole, beneficial to society."

It was only a step from the debate to the mock trial, and in a year or two the latter was so firmly established that the Club passed a resolution "That those employed as witnesses shall not sacrifice propriety to buffoonery." The trials include every crime from which we pray to be delivered, together with a few which the church fathers, in the hour of their sorest temptations, never dreamed of. The case of Æneas vs. Dido for breach of promise was perennial, and has turned up recently as the famous burlesque of 1882. Coriolanus, Cromwell, Marcus Cato, and Mary Queen of Scots came in for a great deal of trying. The case of "The Hasty Pudding Club vs. Don Fernando, for a Bull-baiting, so-called," is reported in full. The defence advanced the plea that it was "pleasant exercise for the bull, and harmless amusement to the dogs." The Club also indicted "Ichabod Roarer, an itinerant Methodist preacher, for frightening women and young girls into fits." The famous case of "The Hasty Pudding Club vs. Tristram Shandy" requires no detailed description.

All this time, however, the pudding was a prime feature of the meetings. The pot was the "yellow goddess" and the members were her "votaries," and the secretaries, to a man, describe the pudding with a glow of lyric feeling (not once, but every time) which is convincing evidence of Madame Kidder's witchcraft. At one of the early meetings, when the commons fare was meagre and appetites were keen, some one had proposed a Choctaw Bible as a prize for putting down the most bowls of pudding. The joke lingered on, mellowing with age, and the Choctaw Bible became one of the traditions of the Club. The point of the fun was that nobody ever actually won the mythical Bible, but several were always just on the point of doing so. Forty years later, a voracious secretary came the nearest to a victory by earning for himself the title of "The Choctaw."

The library had been started in 1808, with "one hundred and twenty choice volumes and a bookcase." It soon grew to such proportions that in 1838 the Corporation accorded it a room in Holworthy. The Club went on debating and trying many of the old cases and whatever new ones were turned up by the times. In 1824 there was a debate on "Whether the proposed alteration of this college from its present state into that of a university be expedient." A few weeks later occurred a debate on the standing grievance of required mathematics. The feeling of the Society ran so high that the Faculty was unanimously consigned to a permanent location in uncomfortable quarters, and the meeting ended in an uproar which brought down the guardian of the entry, no less a person than the reverend Dr. Popkin, familiarly known as "Old Pop." Mrs. Rebecca Kidder had long ago resigned her post in favor of "Sister Stimson," who was in turn succeeded by Madame Dana. In 1831 occurs the first reference to a personage familiar to generations of Pudding men, in an "indictment against those notorious men, Mr. Ferdinand Froth and Don Exquisito Spoons." "In one scene," Charles Page (afterwards Dr.

Page, and Professor of Chemistry at Columbia) "made to enter Mr. Spoons in the character of a long cork, mounted on two crooked pins. Every one was struck by this power of description. All recognized Mr. Spoons in the portrait."

Year by year the body of Hasty Pudding traditions was building itself up, spoon, grid-iron, κροκόδειλος, Strawberry Night, sphinx, and others which have not come down to us. In one place occurs an epitaph to

"Ricochet

Aged 2 years, 9 mo., 18 days, 4 hours, & 1 min.," etc.;

but who or what "Ricochet" was remains a mystery.

The annual exhibition, consisting of an oration and a poem, was, by this time, 1820, being given in 10 University Hall. "The members," says the chronicler, "assembled in U. 10 where the fire burnt bright, and a light, somewhat resembling that of three hours before daybreak, was diffused through the room, which proved to be proceeding from two lamps which were stuck into the seats at the western side." Oliver Wendell Holmes acted as secretary in 1828 and lived to drink a silent health to Washington Allston and William Ellery Channing, who had died shortly before the fiftieth anniversary dinner. The records kept by Holmes are far less brilliant than those of Lowell, though they contain indications of an inveterate habit of punning in such sentences as "Somebody brought us a new suit, and we went courting."

In 1837, James Russell Lowell, of the Class of '38, served as secretary, and his records, kept almost entirely in verse, are a comical mixture of doggerel and lines which are fully as good as anything of the kind he ever did afterwards. His neat, flowing hand, with its shaded down-strokes, makes a page of his handwriting look like a bit of old-fashioned engraving. He undertook the task with the remark:

"The records, read a second time,
Could hardly boast a decent rhyme,
Seemed to despise all common sense,
And set at nought all mood and tense."

Weiss, his predecessor, was an accomplished rhymster, but the new secretary's timidity was soon relieved by the Club's relish of his description of what is now known as a "Yard rough-house." The Club had disbanded late, and,

"The feasters all now having sung 'Lang Syne,' Progressed straight homewards in a crooked line,
And, having got within the college bounds,
And found no proctor on his midnight rounds,
They all of them at once a-shouting fell,
And raised, with all their voices, such a yell
That windows swarm, though 't is the dead of night,
With night-gowned Freshmen, almost dead with fright.
Just so some tomcat, in the soft moonlight,
Returning victor from a recent fight,
Stalks by the crowd in envy silent all,
Curls his long tail and peals his caterwaul."

His address to the pudding pot is a characteristic bit: —

“Hail, lib’ral Ceres, who, with open hand,
Scatters her blessings o’er this teeming land
(All which we owe to Jackson, by the bye,
If Democratic papers do not lie).”

In another place he describes the trial of B. F. Atkins “for eating more than his share of the good things of this world,” in so spirited a manner that one suspects the particulars and the wit of being much more Lowell than the Hasty Pudding Club. After ruining the steward of the College commons and accepting a chicken pie as a bribe to leave (which he refused to share with his roommate, who thereupon called him “both pig and bore”),

“To Plympton’s next the mourning Atkins went,
On dire destruction of the larder bent;
They took him in, not knowing what he was,
But to repent their rashness soon had cause;
They raised their price and lowered their eating, too;
They did it twice, but still it would not do.
At last they gave him but twelve loaves a day,
And sheer starvation drove the man away.”

Halfway through the book Lowell announces that henceforth “I’ve chosen metre Hudibrastic,

In which rhymes stretch like gum elastic,” and in this metre proceeds to a description of evening, and the gathering of the Hasty Pudding Club: —

"The evening star looked mildly down
 Upon this literary town,
 Gazing particularly hard
 Upon the elm-clad College Yard, —
 After the clock on Newell's tow'r
 Told half past seven was the hour,
 She saw in Holworthy sixteen
 A goodly company, I ween."

It is to be hoped that his description of the familiar process of the Society "going to pot" is more realistic than truthful: —

"On this there rose a great commotion:
 'Order!' 'I seconded D's motion.'
 'My toes!' 'Take care o' that molasses!'
 'What'll you have?' 'Mush!' 'Pudding!' 'Asses!'
 'That's my bowl!' 'No, you don't!' 'It is!'
 'Remove your Choctaw Bible phiz!'
 'When you have used that salt, just put!'
 'There, you're too hard for me' — 'My foot!'
 'Shut up your clamshells!' 'Same to you!'
 And so they ring the changes through."

It is a great pity that Lowell's lively and amusing verses should be locked up and buried, and that the fun they gave the Class of '38 should not be shared by the Class of 1908. To be sure they would require a little editing (as would any volume of the records), but the poet's genial lines would meet with an indulgent audience. He closes his official duties with this touching stanza: —

"'T is the last pot of pudding
 Left steaming alone;
 All its jolly companions
 Are gobbled and gone;

No pot of its kindred,
No milk-can is nigh
To reflect back its plumpness,
And give sigh for sigh."

The initiation of the thirties was a mild and somewhat formal affair, including most of the present Pudding symbolism. The story of the initiation is told over and over in the doggerel of the records, with its details of black hangings, masks, sheets, skulls, sulphur saucepan, devil, unriddled sphinx, gridiron, hic jacet, wooden spoon, and the concluding "Brother, taste our coarse fare!" The neophyte was usually ordered to make a speech:—

"Some frothy nonsense first they let him spout,
Then myriad unearthly voices thundered out,
'Unconstitutional! Fanatical!
Heretical! and Ungrammatical!'"

From this beginning the initiations gradually increased in length, secrecy, and severity; the "strips" were added to the hic jacet, and running was introduced, until the initiation was done away with altogether in 1889.

During the late thirties there are recurring indications that the costumes of the mock trials were becoming more and more a feature of the evening. Curtis's sketch of the Hasty Pudding bench would show that the judges wore costumes, if one of the secretaries did not describe “Old Minos, the judge, with a jolly red nose,

And a couple of bolsters stuffed under his clothes.”

Lowell's successor, who, in despair, had eschewed verse, described one of these trials in

THE ACTS OF THE PUDDINGS, CHAPTER II.

9 — And then the Providers went about among the people saying: “Ask and ye shall receive, molasses, or milk?” And there were taken of the fragments one bowl full.

10 — Then they being filled, the chief priest seated himself and said, “Bring forth the prisoner,” and they brought a man whom they called “Benny,” and they accused him of getting thrashed.

11 — And, lo, among others appeared Lieutenant Spitfire, U. S. N., who had a pair of black whiskers rubbed on his face. And he told not one word of truth, nor anything like the truth, and he savoured of burnt cork.

Lowell made such a bewitching plaintiff in the case of Abby Roe vs. Richard Doe for breach of promise,

“That all the Jury, charmed with Abby’s face,
Sentenced young Richard to endure for life
This injured woman as his wedded wife.”

From debates to mock trials had been but one step, and from mock trials to theatricals was the next. At incidental meetings the Club had diverted itself by taking off the speech and gestures of the various Faculty members. In December, 1844, Lemuel Hayward gave the Club a surprise in Hollis 11 by a performance of “Bombastes Furioso.” Peter Porter, who had been taken into the secret over a bowl of oysters at old Snow’s, sketched a scene on some big sheets of brown paper, a curtain was rigged up, and a board two feet longer than the width of the room bowed out beautifully for footlights. “The play,” says Mr. Hayward, “went off splendidly.” Distaffina (the forerunner of a distinguished line of clean-limbed “coryphées”) “wore a low neck and short sleeves, and on her introducing a fairy dance, the applause almost shook old Hollis down. She kept on her dress afterwards and was nearly bothered to death by her admirers.”

This success was followed up in the spring by a dramatization of scenes out of Dickens's latest, "Martin Chuzzlewit," at the suggestion of Francis James Child (afterwards Professor Child): —

“ Since all thought
That a Court
Was just double the trouble
Of a thing of this sort.”

By 1849 the Pudding theatricals were in full swing, and plays alternated with initiation nights. At first, on account of the itinerant character of the meetings, the stage and properties were quite primitive. Tallow dips served for footlights, and for costumes

“There was a borrowing of old hats
And coats to match.”

The apartments of any fellow member in the entry had to serve as green-rooms, and after the performance the rest of the Society “Went to pot,” leaving

“The actresses behind,
Engaged in fruitless effort to unsex them,
For such a multitude of strings they find
In woman's clothing as to quite perplex them.”

Even in 1849, when the Club moved into its first home in the north entry of Stoughton, it was not quite relieved from “The pangs and joys of dramatic days;

The fuss and doubt attending the choice of plays,

Rehearsals' awful bores, the Manager's abuse,
 Three petticoats for seven women's use,
 One looking-glass for fifteen wretched players,
 Running for water down four flights of stairs,
 Absence of paint, but omni-present dirt,
 Constraint to make a towel of one's shirt,
 Two separate claimants for each pair of whiskers,
 Reducing our Concordia to Discors."

For the next thirty years the business of the Club was to act, and its industry is legible in the dozens of clever posters which line the walls of the present club-house, and in a list of 129 performances up to the year 1876. During the fifties and sixties the staples of entertainment were short farces, seven or eight of which were sometimes produced in the course of one season. Many of them were acted over and over again, such as "Lend Me Five Shillings," "Slasher & Crasher," "Chrononhotonthologos," "Box and Cox," "Mother and Child are Doing Well," and "Poor Pillicoddy." It was as "Emily" in "Grimshaw, Bagshaw and Bradshaw" that Nathan Appleton has gone down to history as one of the handsomest heroines of the Pudding stage. If any one doubts his title to that distinction, a glance at his portrait in the part, which hangs on the stairway, will settle the matter. This dramatic fare was varied with "revivals of the legitimate" in such plays as Sheridan's "Rivals," Fielding's "Tom Thumb," and Robinson's "Caste," and by burlesques of "Othello," "Macbeth," "Romeo and Juliet,"

“Lady of Lyons,” “Don Giovanni,” “Norma,” and a favorite travesty of “Lucia di Lammermoor,” this last “with two prima donnas.” Every five or six years “Bombastes Furioso” was revived with unflagging enthusiasm. The Senior Farewell of ’73 was a play on the time-honored theme of “Dido and Æneas,” “with Trojans, muckers, etc., by an efficient corps of Junior spoopses, secured at a great expense ($15.00 each).” It was Mr. Owen Wister’s “Dido and Æneas,” with its celebrated tear-bucket and explosive altar, which, ten years later, performed in Boston and Philadelphia, made the Pudding theatricals famous all over the country.

The Club was at its greatest dramatic activity just before its exile to Jarvis Field. From that time the performances decreased in number and increased in the elaborateness of presentation, until the present program was reached, — three plays a year, one at Christmas, one at Easter (the Senior Farewell), and one on “Strawberry Night” in June. The fashion of giving public performances of a musical burlesque was set by Mr. Wister’s “Dido and Æneas” in ’82, but it did not become an annual affair until the nineties. Since then the Easter plays have been as follows: —

Mr. Lloyd McKim Garrison, in writing the history of the Pudding Theatre, said, "Some day the Pudding's great actors and actresses must have a generous biography, — a leisurely one, full of portraits, anecdotes, the praise and press notices of contemporaries, the detraction of envy and the tribute of admiration, topped off with photographs by Tupper!" This remark might be applied with still greater justice to the whole history of the Pudding. Any attempt to give within the compass of a few pages an account of the earnest group about the first iron pot, the droll eloquence of the early debaters, the absurd proceedings of the Pudding Court, and the roaring farces of the fifties is bound to be a collection of abridged quotations, — less a history than an ellipsis. A very slight investigation of these old books will satisfy any one that our fathers, grandfathers, and great-grandfathers knew how to have an exceedingly good time, and that an account of it in a more accessible form would be rare reading. But the most forcible impression left by turning over the pages of this unbroken record of more than a hundred years is that a history of the Hasty Pudding since its foundation would be a fairly complete account of Harvard College since 1795.

LUCIEN PRICE, 1907.

REFORM OF THE PUDDING IN 1880

IN 1880 the old method of initiation and of electing members was abolished under circumstances which seemed, at the time, very dramatic. It was then customary for the Seniors to elect nine Juniors, who in turn chose the second nine from their class, and these combined to choose the third, and so on. The election took place at the Club's rooms on Holmes Field on Friday evening, and the Club, on returning to the Yard, gathered near the old Rebellion Tree and spelled out the names and cheered each of the nine in order. To be on the first nine was commonly regarded as the most popular distinction a fellow could receive. The first nine from 1881, announced on February 27, consisted of Edward D. Brandegee, Edward W. Atkinson, William R. Thayer, Charles A. Coolidge, Lawrence Godkin, William Y. Peters, William A. Slater, George P. Upham, Jr., and Robert Sturgis.

"Running," the preliminary of initiation, began on Sunday evening. Each Junior neophyte had a Senior mentor, who instructed him in the requirements. The neophyte had to run at top speed whenever he crossed the Yard; he must attend all his recitations; he was not allowed to speak to any non-Pudding man, except, of course, to the College officers, for academic purposes; and he must go to bed, and stay there, an hour earlier each night — which meant that on Thursday his bedtime came at six o'clock.

It was notorious that these Spartan rules had often been broken, and the mentors of several of our nine practically led us to understand that the whole proceeding was a farce. At any rate, eight of us regarded it as such, and, except for running in the Yard, we did not pretend to perform the requirements. So Friday evening came, and in our swallow-tail coats and white ties we were escorted to the Society rooms, and put through the old initiation, after which, as was the custom, the president asked us whether we had obeyed strictly our mentor's commands. When one after another replied, somewhat jocularly, "no," the president put the question to the Society, "Shall this neophyte be admitted?" The Society, following its usual practice, voted "no," and the neophyte, who had been blindfolded from the moment he entered the building, was led blindfolded away. Usually, when he had got almost back to the Yard, a Senior came hot-foot in pursuit, to tell him that, as the Society had voted to reconsider, he "was in," after all. Whereupon he was hurried back in triumph to the rooms and jubilantly welcomed by the Seniors.

In our case, however, no good messenger followed, and we, still believing that the Seniors were simply prolonging the hoax, met in Coolidge's and my study, — the second-story room at the corner of Holyoke and Main Streets — which became henceforth our headquarters. By and by, Seniors returning from Holmes Field assured us that the meeting was dead in earnest, and that, unless we ran a second week, we should not be admitted. In due time we received from the Secretary of the Pudding a formal warning to this effect. This treatment thoroughly exasperated us. We felt that we had been deceived by our mentors, and that the '80 men had no right to apply seriously against us rules which had been treated as a joke by earlier classes. At first, we refused to run again. The Seniors, on their side, refused to reconsider. Then for nearly a week such an excitement prevailed among undergraduates and graduates as has not been seen since. Everybody, whether a Pudding man or not, discussed the deadlock; for all were interested in the fortunes of Harvard's most famous society. Many graduates upheld us, others blamed; and, as we still seemed unyielding, all began to discuss how the very existence of the Pudding could be saved. Some proposed to skip the Class of 1881 altogether, by choosing a first nine from 1882, but they could not serve till they became Juniors; others suggested that the Class continuity might be kept unbroken by Robert Sturgis, who had not joined us eight, and who had been admitted, therefore, but not formally received. But Sturgis, if I remember right, although he had not joined in our non-observance of running, said that he would share the same fate as the rest of the nine. After much heated debate, and with much reluctance, we refractory eight consented to run a second week, because we did not think it fair to cut off sixty or seventy members of our Class from the pleasures of the Pudding. For many of them, to "make the Pudding" was their highest social satisfaction.

So we eight ran that second week, and when we were questioned again by the president, I suppose that we were the only batch of neophytes all of whom could honestly reply that they had literally fulfilled every condition.

Then we became masters of the Pudding, for after the initiation of the Juniors' first nine the Seniors retired. Three of our number, — Godkin, Peters, and Upham, — raging at what they regarded as '80's insincerity and truculence, resigned, in spite of our efforts to dissuade them. That left six of us to continue the Society. We took at once two revolutionary steps: we abolished those parts of the running and initiation to which we had objected, believing that Pudding men were mostly too old for such juvenilities; and we adopted a new method of choosing the rest of the members from our Class. We six elected all the succeeding nines — a much more expeditious way, and perhaps fairer than the old. The Society, as a whole, could repair omissions after the nines we had chosen were all in. A year or two after our time, the reform was carried still farther, members being elected in batches of twenty-five and announced in alphabetical order. With that change passed away the ephemeral splendors of the first nine; eligible Juniors no longer lay awake nights wondering whether they would make it, and whether, if they did, their number would be fourth or fifth. Sic transit gloria mundi. Looking back on the incident after nearly thirty years, I am struck by the altruism displayed by our consenting to run that second week. As to the reforms we initiated, nobody can now doubt their desirability.

Our Class engaged in one other important work. Realizing that the growth of the Pudding called for larger quarters, '80 had plans drawn for a new club-house. We felt the need even more keenly, for the rooms on Holmes Field were so inaccessible that few members would attend meetings in them during the winter, and we had to hire rooms on Brattle Street, opposite the Holly Tree, for our regular Friday evening gatherings, keeping the "theatre" on Holmes Field for "play nights." At the Christmas Theatricals in 1881, having previously conferred with various prominent graduates, I, as president, set forth the Society's needs. After some discussion, the Hon. George Washington Warren, '30, the oldest graduate present, moved that it was the sense of the meeting that a committee of five undergraduates and ten graduates be appointed to consider ways and means. This committee met from time to time during the remainder of our year, and although it achieved no tangible results, it handed on to '82 so well-developed an agitation that '82 could go ahead and canvass for funds.

WILLIAM ROSCOE THAYER, 1881.

THE FIRST OPERETTA

COULD temptation be more insidious than that which lurks in the following lines ?

“ . . . it is just twenty-five years since the first operetta, ‘Dido and Æneas,’ was given, and it would be interesting to hear from you how it came to be written, etc., with perhaps some little sketch of the Pudding of ’82.”

To write a letter thus opening the door of a graduate’s memory, is to invite a blast of anecdote and reminiscence, dear and refreshing to himself indeed, — but to how many others ? The Musical Manager of the Pudding, of the Class of 1882, complies with the request with something more than cheerfulness; and he will do his best not to maunder or moralize.

Before Senior year, our company had produced four musical burlesques: “Ivanhoe,” “Der Freischütz,” “Kenilworth,” and “The Lady of the Lake.” The approval with which “Ivanhoe” was greeted by a graduate audience in Cambridge, at Christmas time, when we were Sophomores, filled us with delighted astonishment (the dress-rehearsal had been a mournful affair) and revealed to us that our company was strong in good players, who could also sing, and sing well, not solos only, but concerted pieces too. We possessed, moreover, an agile and harmonious chorus. Attired as Anglo-Saxon cooks of Cedric's household, their opening song —

to an obligato of wooden bowls and spoons, had to be repeated, before the audience would allow the drama to proceed. To the Musical Manager it would be pleasant here to dwell upon that first performance of “Ivanhoe,” in December, 1879; he could spend many words upon Brian de Bois Guilbert, Isaac of York, Wamba, and the tournament; but it must suffice to say that, with the confidence in our dramatic and musical strength gained by this performance, our company proceeded onward to “Der Freischütz.” Into the printed text of this burlesque more music was written than in the first play; more songs, but especially more concerted pieces, the second and third finales being fairly elaborate. It was now not merely upon Offenbach and Sullivan that we drew, but we tapped the reservoirs of Gounod and Wagner! With perfect irreverence the Musical Manager travestied a melodious passage from “Rienzi” to furnish the chorus at the end of the casting of the magic bullets. It may be doubted if Wagner's music had ever, until this night, been sung at Harvard undergraduate theatricals; but, in any case, the result was happy. The curtain had to be raised, and “Rienzi” was sung all over again — though unassisted by the copious red and green Bengal lights, which had burned themselves out, leaving nothing but a surprisingly awful and choking smoke. To our joy and pride, we were requested to perform in public for the benefit of the crew; accordingly in the spring holidays, "Ivanhoe" and "Der Freischütz" were given in New York, at the old University Club theatre, Madison Square, and again in Boston upon our return. It was very agreeable to be assured by "graduates of long standing" that we had broken all records in the college-theatrical line, even '79's brilliant one, established by "The Fair Rosamond." "Kenilworth," our Strawberry night play, though insufficiently rehearsed, was another step forward in musical elaboration; and certainly no effect ever produced by the company surpassed the entrance of Queen Elizabeth upon the deck of a steamboat, named London Pride. The Musical Manager would quickly lay down his pen, and hasten to Cambridge, and do it all over again to-morrow. But heavens! Queen Elizabeth is a lawyer in Cincinnati, Varney strays at large along the Pacific coast, Wayland Smith is a banker in Paris, and Amy Robsart preaches the gospel. What are you going to do? A year passed, and our Junior Strawberry night in the Pudding saw the last of our burlesques, "The Lady of the Lake." Once more the music drew a further step away from mere interpolation, and approached nearer forming a part of the organic essence of the piece. We sang a fugue to the words, "What a scene of wild confusion"; and the trio between Fitz James, Ellen, and the Family Bard (who played on a toy piano) was found pleasing. Our finale was the most elaborate that we had ever ventured upon.

Thus it was, then, that "Dido and Æneas," the first out-and-out operetta, came to be written. The above brief history of its predecessors affords the clearest account that could be given. We had become a company sure of itself, well schooled in individual work, but, far more important, in "team work" also. Moreover, we had come to the end of available printed burlesques. The best ones — or those at least whose subjects could best appeal to the Pudding audience of that day — had been given by other classes too recently, or by ourselves. "The Fair Rosamond," "Romulus and Remus," "Fra Diavolo," "The Merchant of Venice," "Faust," "Lucretia Borgia, M. D." — all these, and many others, had been seen too recently, and nothing of promise remained on the list. Even our own "Der Freischütz" had been a poor choice — saved only by our re-modelling of it — because its original was familiar to but very few of our audience.

So here was the problem: to find a subject which, by its very name, should awaken familiar memories at once. In those days, the American youth who entered Harvard had studied Virgil's epic poem as far as the end of the sixth book. A great ambition entered the breast of the Musical Manager. Thanks to Mr. Maurice Grau and his French Opera Company, all of us theatre-goers had seen "La Belle Hélène," and its kindred operas, performed by Aimée, and her successor, Paola Mariée. Does any heart still palpitate, do any lips still smile, at the mention of Angèle, Mezières, Duplan, Juteau, Capoul? Does any memory still respond to

" Le roi barbu qui s'avance
— bu qui s'avance, — bu qui s'avance ? "

Nothing that Sullivan and Gilbert ever wrote equals these French operettas in brilliance and melody. They stand entirely alone, surpassing everything of the sort that has attempted to imitate them. Well, the Musical Manager attempted to imitate them. If a comic opera had been extracted from the unlucky Menelaus, another might be got out of the pious Æneas. Without imparting his ambition to the company, the Musical Manager set to work during the summer holidays between Junior and Senior year. All of us had grown a trifle weary of the traditional dialogue of burlesque, carried on in rhymed couplets. Retaining this for immortal speakers only, Venus and Juno in the prologue, and the Ghost of Father Anchises in the third act, the Musical Manager cast off the burlesque model definitely and intentionally, and ventured to write his dialogue in prose. A faint and musty odor of the old burlesque tradition lingers about this prose, in the atrocious puns; but in other respects "Dido and Æneas" was cast in the form of the Opéra-bouffe, as perfected by Meilhac and Halévy for Offenbach. The Musical Manager did not venture to write original music for his text. Although he put in "little things of his own" here and there, he felt himself unequal to creating melody sufficiently attractive to last a whole evening, and hence followed his old custom of ransacking the pages of others; Offenbach, Lecoq, Suppé, Sullivan, Bizet, Meyerbeer, and Wagner were among those to whom he had recourse. Returning to college, he confided in the Acting Manager, and showed him the three acts which he had written during August and September. They were approved; and a course of revision and polishing began, which ended in the production of "Dido and Æneas," at the Pudding Rooms, in the spring of 1882. The orchestra had been postponed until the final word. Hitherto, the Musical Manager had, both in private and public performances, accompanied the plays upon a piano, according to established custom. This custom, with many doubts on his part, but none at all on the part of the Acting Manager, was broken, and for the first time in its history (so it is believed) the Hasty Pudding audience listened to a piece definitely modelled upon the French operetta, with action carried on during concerted numbers and finales, and accompanied by an orchestra. As the first measures of the brief prelude struck up, the Musical Manager, already very much frightened, heard laughter go all over the room behind him, while he sat in his conductor's chair, and pretended to wave his baton, as if he knew how to do it. His anxiety increased, and was not all gone by the end of the first act, although it seemed as if, so far, the audience was entertained. He asked some one what the laughter had been about, and was told that it was merely an ebullition of pleased diversion at the novelty of an orchestra in those rooms. At the end of the play, he was satisfied that his own doubts over this innovation had been mistaken, and that the Acting Manager was a true prophet in advocating and insisting upon it. A "real" manager, after seeing us, made us a business offer to "go on the road"!

We had not suspected that we were marking an epoch with our piece and its orchestra; it seems that we did. That epoch would never have been marked but for our company, our gallant company, of principals and chorus — the agile, harmonious chorus, whose willingness and remarkable power to "catch on," if so unacademic a phrase may be employed, remain to-day with the Musical Manager as vivid as does the extraordinary interpretation of Dido. In spite of the many rehearsals, and the succession of performances (the piece was played in Philadelphia,

New York, and Boston) Dido's dance in the third act was a perpetual and upsetting surprise. But the Musical Manager can remember no part that was not adequately filled; and when, on account of duties more pressing, Venus and Ascanius could not "go on," we borrowed two stars from the Class of '83, whose light shone as radiant as any we could boast.

Well, it is all over and done with, long ago; yet it so stands out in memory as to obliterate even our "running" for the Pudding, and our initiation night. It is difficult to remember that we were then elected by nines; that during the week before we were "taken in," we were obliged to sprint whenever we entered the Yard; that our initiation consisted in singing an original ode, and in swallowing competitively a bowlful of thick, heavy, sticky, impregnable, recalcitrant mush. All these things can be recalled by the will; but "Dido and Æneas" recalls itself. More than the running or the initiation, more than "The Lady of the Lake," it unites the Pudding of 1882; it was our great adventure. We wasted a precious lot of time over it. One of us, at any rate, would do so again.

OWEN WISTER, 1882.

¹ Though the Class of 1860 was the first to establish this office, its duties were performed during the preceding years by volunteers, of whose works much remains that is notable. These gentlemen were: John Chandler Bancroft, Horace Howard Furness, and William Stanley Haseltine, '54; Alexander Agassiz, '55; Rowland Minturn Hall, '56; James Starr and Samuel Wells, '57; Louis Cabot, '58; and Edmund Wetmore, '60. Oliver Wendell Holmes, '61, Robert Swain Peabody, '66, and Edmund March Wheelwright, '76, have also acted as Artists without election. In the Constitution of 1889 this office was omitted, but volunteers have continued the work.

LIST OF HONORARY MEMBERS

[This list is composed of those Honorary Members of the Hasty Pudding Club elected after graduation; and those never connected with any Academic Class, either as regular members of it, or of the same class in the Lawrence Scientific School, or as Special Students of Harvard College. The letters L.S. and M.S. in parentheses indicate an election from the Law School or Medical School.]

ELECTED 1850-1867

[The practice of electing Honorary Members from the Faculty began about 1857. The nine names following appear in the 1867 Catalogue, but no record of their election remains. The Secretary's records from 1857 to 1861, which are missing, very probably contained most of them.]

INDEX OF NAMES

[The names are first arranged alphabetically by family, and then chronologically. The numeral to the left is that of the year under which the name is catalogued; when followed by an h, the name is to be found in the separate list of honorary members. In the case of honoraries elected after graduation, they are arranged with reference to their college class, which follows, instead of preceding, the name — e. g.: [1857*h*] Ephraim Whitman Gurney, '52.]

CATALOGUES OF THE HASTY PUDDING CLUB

IN the first volume of Secretary's Records (p. 6) appear the names of the members of the classes from 1797 to 1801 inclusive. The signatures, except those of the classes of 1797 and 1798, are in autograph.

Volume II of the Records (pp. 8-10) contains the autograph signatures of the members from 1802 to 1807 inclusive.

The names were kept till the class of 1847 in two MS. catalogues containing the membership lists presumably written in by the Secretary from class to class. The first of these catalogues is from 1797 to 1835 inclusive, and the second from 1838 to 1846 inclusive, with the substance of the first catalogue copied into it, and separate lists of officers. These catalogues are not reliable, as many elections recorded in the Secretaries' minutes are wanting, and their lists of officers are largely untrustworthy.

In 1829 a printed catalogue of the Club was issued, followed at intervals of from five to ten years by eleven others. The first catalogue was evidently prepared from the first MS. catalogue, and those which subsequently followed it embraced all the errors of the original.

These catalogues were as follows:

I. 1829. A small pamphlet of thirteen pages, printed by E. W. Metcalf & Co., in Cambridge. It contained the names of 611 living and 127 dead members, and their offices held in the Club (very incorrectly).

II. 1838. Cambridge: Metcalf, Torrey & Ballou. pp. 36. Contains the names of 188 new members, living and dead, making the total since the foundation 926. Also a catalogue of books and periodicals in the Club library.

III. 1841. Cambridge: Metcalf, Torrey & Ballou. pp. 48. Adds the names of 39 living members [total 965], and largely increased catalogue of library.

IV. 1846. Cambridge: Metcalf & Co. Small pamphlet of size adopted by every subsequent catalogue. pp. 56. Bears on cover print of Club seal (obverse and reverse). Also (obverse) on title-page and (reverse) on last page the same print repeated. [This feature was not abandoned till 1867 Catalogue.] Contains list of officers in place of library catalogue, and names "more than 1000 members, of whom about 800 are surviving."

V. 1850. Cambridge: Metcalf & Co. pp. 68. Contains names of 1184 members, "of whom 873 are now surviving."

VI. 1855. Cambridge: Metcalf & Co. pp. 76. Contains the names of 1315 members, "of whom 1002 are now surviving." Notes 4500 volumes in the library, an increase for the year of 200.

VII. 1860. Cambridge: Welch, Bigelow & Co. pp. 83. Contains the names of 1449 members, "of whom 985 are now surviving."

VIII. 1867. Boston: Rockwell & Rollins. pp. 94. Contains the names of 1714 members, "of whom 1096 are now surviving"; also, for the first time, a list of Honorary members.

IX. 1874. Boston: Rockwell & Churchill. pp. 112. Contains the names of 1981 members, "of whom 1209 are living."

X. 1884. Cambridge: W. H. Wheeler. pp. 157. Carefully revised. Contains the names of "nearly 3000 members."

XI. 1891. Cambridge: W. H. Wheeler. Contains the names of 3688 members, of whom 2444 survive.

XII. 1902. Jamaica, Queensborough, New York: The Marion Press. Contains the names of 4781 members, of whom 3294 survive.

XIII. 1907. Cambridge: The Riverside Press. Contains the names of 5312 members, of whom 3486 survive.
